THE WRITING CENTER

AN INITIATIVE OF THE PRINCETON WRITING PROGRAM

www.princeton.edu/writing

The Writing Center offers student writers free one-on-one conferences with experienced fellow writers trained to consult on assignments in any discipline.

“Explaining my argument to a new reader forced me to articulate my ideas, which in turn helped me to recognize flaws in my thesis and my train of thought. Trying to convince an active listener who asked questions and made suggestions really helped the coherence of my essay.”

“This session was absolutely invaluable.”

“The Writing Center Fellow was just incredibly nice and patient, and got really interested in our discussion. I am now very excited about the topic and our discussion formed the basis for a lot of thinking I did on my own later.”

“We looked over new and old material for my dissertation’s introductory chapter. We clarified my thesis and key terms, organized my thoughts, and planned how the rest of the chapter might be structured. Having 80 minutes devoted to this project was so helpful!”

Every writer needs a reader.

ALL PRINCETON STUDENTS ARE WELCOME AT THE WRITING CENTER

- Bring writing projects at any stage – rough ideas, an outline, a partial or full draft – in any academic discipline or genre.
- Work on any aspect of your project: developing your thesis, structuring your claims, assessing counterarguments, or demonstrating your essay’s significance to your intended audience.
- Although the Writing Center is not an editing or proofreading service, Fellows teach strategies for improving sentences and checking mechanics.
